Performance that Drives Progress

Leadership Message

Our success depends on each of us living up to these standards. I commit to you that I will do so. I expect no less from each and every one of you.

Exelon's vision of performance that drives progress depends on each one of us committing to our values – every job, every shift, every day. Whether it's our companywide commitments to safety, diversity, equity and inclusion, or the communities we serve, we must embrace the highest ethical standards as we pursue our business strategy.

This is your entry point to the Exelon Code of Business Conduct. This is no poster on the wall. Our Code is an active and vibrant part of our everyday business: how we act, how we make decisions, how we treat our partners and colleagues, how we relate to the communities where we each live and work. The Code is designed for use – to answer questions you may have about unclear situations, or simply to point you in the right direction. In short, our Exelon Code of Business Conduct outlines what is expected of all of us to meet our obligations, and gives us resources to understand these requirements and live up to them.

Please read this Code carefully and, if you have any questions, ask your supervisor or contact the Compliance and Ethics Office at EthicsOffice2@exeloncorp.com.

Sincerely,
Christopher M. Crane
President and Chief Executive Officer

10 Conclusion

01 Our Purpose

Powering a cleaner and brighter future for our customers and communities.

Our Values

We are dedicated to safety

We are committed to maintaining the highest standards of safety and reliability for our people, our customers and the communities in which we work. As a fundamental part of our culture and operations, every member of the Exelon team is dedicated to putting safety first.

We actively pursue excellence

We are driven to excel. Recognizing the value of constant improvement, we reach beyond compliance to advance our processes and develop more efficient energy. In all we do, we passionately exceed the standards of our industry – and those we set for ourselves – creating value for our shareholders, customers and communities.

We innovate to better serve our customers

We see challenge as an opportunity to exercise our ingenuity and our competitive spirit. We encourage curiosity and exploration to develop better ways of delivering clean energy. We innovate with focus and intent, creating the solutions that matter most for our customers.

We act with integrity and are accountable to our communities and the environment

We are committed to doing what's right. A deep connection to the communities we serve compels us to take responsibility for our work, and we actively look for ways to engage and give back. We value the environment and work to reduce our impact with future generations in mind.

We succeed as an inclusive and diverse team

We foster an inclusive culture of trust, collaboration and performance. We welcome and respect people with different perspectives, backgrounds and traits because we know that diverse teams drive powerful outcomes.

02 Performance that Drives Progress

To deliver on our vision to provide reliable, clean, and affordable energy, each of us – our system engineers, customer support personnel, data analysts, security staff, administrative personnel, and senior executives – must play a key role in building a brighter, more sustainable future. How we run our business is just as crucial as the results we achieve.

Our shared values shape how we work with each other, our customers and our communities. They reflect what is truly important to us as an organization.

They serve as the foundation of our culture and the Exelon Code of Business Conduct (the Code), and help guide behavior and decision making across Exelon.

Wherever we operate, each one of us represents Exelon. Each of us is the face of the company in our local communities. Living the values every day and following the Code sets us apart from other companies and ensures performance that drives progress.

03 Following the Code

Because we actively pursue excellence, each of us must reach beyond compliance. Setting the bar high strengthens our reputation as an industry leader and is the right way to conduct our business.

While the Code cannot describe all situations where questions of ethics may arise, it is a resource for making effective, ethical business decisions. It enables us to identify situations that may raise ethical and legal issues. It also helps us understand what Exelon expects of each of us.

We are all accountable for following the Code. Specifically, the Code applies to:

- Employees, officers, and directors of Exelon and its subsidiaries
- Third party vendors and contractors must adhere to the Code's principles described in the Exelon Supplier Code of Conduct

We are all responsible for understanding and following the Code. Integrity and accountability require that we:

- Are honest
- Live our values every day
- Follow the law, regulatory requirements and Exelon policies when conducting company business
- Treat everyone with respect and decency
- Use common sense and good judgment
- Promptly seek guidance when unsure about the right thing to do
- Speak up when we see a problem

04 Our Responsibilities

Special Responsibilities of Managers

While we are all expected to do our part in understanding and following the Code, Exelon managers – from first-line supervisors to senior leaders – have an additional responsibility to lead by example and uphold our values.

Managers must:

- Demonstrate the highest ethical standards and quality in their work and hold others to the same standards
- Treat others with respect, while ensuring appropriate accountability
- Not bend the rules or pressure others to do so
- Understand and communicate laws, regulations, policies, and procedures affecting their areas of operation with support from the Legal Department, Compliance and Ethics, and other company subject matter experts
- Encourage team members to speak up without fear of retaliation
- Exercise meaningful oversight of employee actions implicating ethics and compliance
- Act to prevent problems before they happen, and intervene early as problems emerge
- Report problems or possible violations to the Compliance and Ethics Office, HR or the Legal Department
- Promptly seek guidance when they are unsure about the right thing to do

In addition, employees who engage or are responsible for overseeing external business partners must:

- Provide effective oversight of vendors and contractor personnel to ensure third parties adhere to applicable contract terms, provisions of the Exelon Supplier Code of Conduct and company policies and procedures
- Take action – up to and including terminating a contract – if a vendor fails to honor its contractual commitments or violates the Supplier Code of Conduct, and report violations to Supply or the Compliance and Ethics Office.

The Importance of Speaking Up and Seeking Help

An open culture that encourages us to voice our opinions and concerns will help us capture great ideas and mitigate risks we face. When people speak up, we innovate and improve, which drives progress at Exelon. When people speak up to report improper behavior, we can resolve issues before harm is done or ensure prompt, effective remediation of any harm that has occurred.

We must seek advice when we're unsure about the proper course of action. We also are required to speak up immediately if we see something that violates – or could violate – the law or the Code. If something does not feel right, we must take action to ensure that we maintain our standards and serve our customers well.

Resources

If policies and procedures do not provide clear direction, we should ask our managers or the Compliance and Ethics Office for guidance.

There are many resources available when employees have a question or need additional guidance, or when they need to raise a concern or report a potential violation. Supervisors and managers are the best initial source.

An employee can seek assistance through any of the following options:

- Department leadership
- Human Resources
- Compliance and Ethics Office
- Ethics Help Line & Web Portal
- Legal Department
- Exelon Audit Services
- Corporate and Information Security Services

Compliance and Ethics Office

The Compliance and Ethics Office is responsible for administering Exelon's Compliance and Ethics program. It is the primary resource for seeking guidance about the Code and is responsible for ensuring that all reports of potential violations are properly investigated and resolved.

The Compliance and Ethics Office can be reached:

- Directly at EthicsOffice2@Exeloncorp.com; or
- Through the Exelon Ethics Helpline Website

Exelon Help Line and Web Portal

The Ethics Help Line and web portal are available 24 hours a day, every day of the year. Both have an anonymous reporting option. The Help Line is a dedicated resource for asking compliance and ethics questions, raising compliance and ethics concerns, and reporting suspected violations of the law or the Code. No attempt is made to identify individuals who choose to remain anonymous.

All calls to the Help Line are answered by an independent third-party vendor that offers multilingual service. Caller ID is not used. A report of each call is forwarded to the Compliance and Ethics Office for assessment and appropriate follow-up action.

All reporters are issued a case number and a confidential Report Key and password that allows the reporter to follow up on a report, even if the reporter has chosen to remain anonymous. During a follow up, a reporter can access responses from the Compliance and Ethics Office, including requests for additional information that may be required before an effective investigation can occur.

The Ethics Help Line

(with anonymous reporting option) can be reached:

By phone:

1-800-23ETHIC
(1-800-233-8442)

Via web portal:

On your Exelon Connect home page, click the Ethics Helpline tab located in the footer, and follow the prompts, or enter the following address into your browser: <https://secure.ethicspoint.com/domain/media/en/gui/71992/index.html>

Reporting Possible Violations

Ethical, legal, and regulatory lapses can harm many Exelon stakeholders – including employees, customers, investors, and the communities we serve. They can also negatively impact our hard-earned reputation as an energy industry leader.

We all have the responsibility to report promptly – and in good faith – any activity that may violate the Code or applicable laws, rules, or regulations. As noted in the Resources section, there are multiple options for reporting possible violations.

Note that these options do not restrict employees in the exercise of their rights to report a concern to regulatory and law enforcement authorities including, but not limited to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, the Department of Justice, and the Securities and Exchange Commission.

All reports will be treated confidentially, to the fullest extent possible under the circumstances. Employees must cooperate completely and honestly in any investigation. When an allegation is substantiated Exelon will take appropriate corrective action, including measures to prevent similar issues from occurring in the future.

For more information, see Management Model Procedure LE-AC-204, Reporting Potential Violations of the Code of Business Conduct.

No Tolerance for Retaliation

Exelon will not tolerate retaliation against anyone who, in good faith, raises a question or concern about a potential violation of the Code or potential non-compliance with applicable laws or regulations. Retaliation in any form – threats, harassment, intimidation, violence, reassignment, demotion, or firing – has no place in our organization.

If any employee believes they have been subjected to retaliation because of speaking out or participating in an investigation, the employee should immediately contact one of the entities listed in the Resources section. Anyone who threatens or engages in any act of retaliation is subject to discipline, up to and including termination.

Making Ethical Decisions

How we make decisions says as much about who we are as a company as the decision itself. It is important to make decisions we can be proud of.

This decision tree can help us navigate gray areas and ensure we make the best choices for Exelon.

Investigations

Exelon takes each report seriously, no matter how the report is received. Our procedures are designed to promptly review and address each issue.

Participating completely and honestly in any investigation conducted by the company is mandatory. Withholding information or being untruthful in an investigation can lead to discipline, up to and including termination.

For more information, see Corporate Procedure LE-AC-205, Investigating and Resolving Alleged Violations of the Code of Business Conduct.

Certification of Compliance

All non-represented employees, officers, and directors of Exelon and its subsidiaries must complete a certification of compliance questionnaire each year, which is reviewed and followed up on, as appropriate, by the Compliance and Ethics Office. Responses that identify potential violations of the law or Code will be fully investigated.

03 How We Uphold the Code

Disciplinary Action

The Code is important to the company and violations will not be tolerated. The Code must be appropriately enforced, regardless of the seniority, role, or location of those involved in misconduct.

Exelon will consider matters involving potential criminal conduct for referral to law enforcement.

Disciplinary action may be taken against any Exelon employee, officer, or director who:

- Authorizes or participates in actions that violate the Code or the law
- Fails to report or delays the reporting of a Code violation
- Fails to cooperate with an investigation, conceals information or otherwise intentionally obstructs an investigation concerning a suspected violation of the Code or law
- Retaliates or discriminates in any way against anyone who, in good faith, reports a suspected Code or legal violation or cooperates in an investigation of a suspected violation
- Fails to complete or falsely completes a certification of compliance or related questionnaire

Types of discipline may include:

- Reprimand or warning
- Suspension or other administrative leave
- Demotion
- Reduction of bonus or incentive award
- Restitution for losses or damages
- Termination of employment

Waivers

A waiver of any provision of the Code will be made only in exceptional circumstances for substantial cause. Requests for waivers must be submitted to the Chief Compliance and Ethics Officer for review and resolution. Any request for a waiver by any director or executive officer must be submitted to Exelon's Board of Directors or a Board committee. In addition, any waiver of a provision in the Code for any director or executive officer must be disclosed to shareholders.

Promoting a Safe and Healthy Workplace

How We Live Our Values

We must maintain the highest standards of safety and reliability for our people, our customers, and the public.

06 Our People

Why It's Important

We are dedicated to safety – this is an Exelon value. Our people do complicated work that can be dangerous if not performed in a safe manner. Maintaining the highest standards of safety and reliability helps keep our people, customers, and the public free from harm, our job sites secure and our productivity levels high. No job is so important and no schedule so urgent that we can't take the time to plan, perform and supervise work in a safe and compliant manner.

We seek to prevent all accidents and injuries, and Exelon will provide the resources needed to keep our worksites safe and healthy. In turn, we are all accountable for properly using these resources to eliminate health and safety hazards.

Our commitment to safety also includes protecting our employees from the risk of violence in the workplace. Acts of violence, threats and physical intimidation are strictly prohibited at any Exelon work location.

What's Expected

"Safety first" requires us to:

- Report to work fit for duty, take responsibility for our own safety and look out for the safety of others
- Know and follow all health and safety laws and regulations, as well as Exelon policies, procedures and established practices
- Ensure the safety and security of our customers and communities through compliance with safety regulations and sharing relevant safety information
- Eliminate potential hazards and continually improve safety performance in all areas of the company
- Not take unnecessary risks on the job
- Stop work immediately if it cannot be done safely
- Speak up immediately if we:
 - See a health or safety hazard
 - Have a safety incident or near-miss
 - Observe threatening or violent behavior
 - Observe any other behavior or event that could signal unsafe working conditions or actions, including physical contact with others or comments about plans to hurt someone
- Not possess any weapons, explosives, or incapacitating devices on company property, job sites or while on duty, in company vehicles (unless specifically authorized by company policies, or with prior approval from Corporate and Information Security Services)

The Right Decisions

Q A co-worker recently challenged our supervisor regarding a work plan for a new project, suggesting we consider a different approach because of concerns for the safety of the employees performing the work. The suggested alternative would lengthen the time to complete the project and the supervisor rejected it without discussion. Should I pursue the issue further?

A Yes. Our commitment to employee safety must come first. You and your co-workers may be able to get your supervisor to reconsider and discuss the safety issue. If you're not comfortable having that conversation and the concerns persist, the situation must be reported either up the management chain or to other resources, including the Compliance and Ethics Office, the Legal Department, or Human Resources.

Maintaining a Drug-Free and Alcohol-Free Workplace

How We Live Our Values

We require a drug-free and alcohol-free workplace that supports Exelon’s commitment to the safety and health of our people and the public.

Why It’s Important

Safety is our priority. To do our work safely and effectively, we must be able to think clearly and react quickly. The health, safety, and performance of everyone at Exelon demands that we are free from any substances – including drugs and alcohol – that could prevent us from doing our jobs properly.

What’s Expected

Maintaining a drug- and alcohol-free workplace requires that we must:

- Not use, possess or be under the influence of illicit drugs or alcohol while on duty, on company premises, or in company vehicles
- Recognize the signs of others being under the influence of alcohol or drugs, including slurred speech, bloodshot eyes, uneven gait or stumbling, and the odor of alcohol, marijuana, or similar substances
- Follow all laws and regulations governing the use or possession of alcohol and drugs
- Speak up immediately if we observe a colleague who may be under the influence of alcohol or drugs while at work
- Use good judgment when alcohol is served at Exelon-sponsored events
- Inform Exelon’s Occupational Health and Safety Department if using, for medical reasons, any prescription or non-prescription drug that may impair alertness or judgment

For more information, see HR-AC-16, our Drug and Alcohol Policy.

The Right Decisions

Q I recently noticed that a co-worker had alcohol on his breath while at work the last few mornings. Do I need to report it to someone?

A Yes. We can’t ignore potential violations of our Drug and Alcohol policies. Employees under the influence of drugs or alcohol pose a safety risk to themselves, other employees, and customers. We also want to encourage employees who may be suffering from substance abuse to use the resources provided by the company, such as the Employee Assistance Program (EAP). You must immediately report your observations to your supervisor or, if that is uncomfortable or impractical, to Human Resources or the Compliance and Ethics Office.

Living Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion

How We Live Our Values

At Exelon, we value our differences in background, skills, perspectives and thinking. We must make the most of everyone’s contribution to collaborate, innovate and perform to our full potential.

Why It’s Important

Exelon operates in a world that’s extremely diverse. Valuing individual differences in race, color, national origin, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity, disability, religious affiliation, experience and thought makes us a stronger, more successful organization. When we’re inclusive, we all contribute to solving problems, overcoming challenges, and achieving our vision of performance that drives progress.

Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion at Exelon strengthen us because they:

- Foster an environment of mutual respect and trust, in which each of us has the opportunity to grow and contribute our greatest potential
- Enable us to attract, retain and develop colleagues who will best serve and represent our customers, shareholders, partners, and communities
- Provide different viewpoints that promote innovation, drive powerful outcomes, and ultimately make the company more successful

What’s Expected

We must:

- Welcome and respect people with different perspectives, backgrounds, and traits
- Evaluate individuals based on qualifications and demonstrated skills and achievements without regard to personal characteristics, including, for example, race, color, national origin, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity, disability, or religious affiliation
- Consider a diverse range of candidates in hiring, promotion, and other employment decisions
- Promote communication that is open, direct, honest, and respectful

For more information, see our Diversity, Equity & Inclusion page on Exelon Connect and Diversity & Inclusion Annual Report.

The Right Decisions

Q We are looking for a new technician at one of our facilities. One of the applicants is missing a limb. He has a prosthetic and has the right training, but some people on the hiring team have questioned whether his disability will limit his ability to complete his job duties in an effective and timely manner. How should this situation be handled?

A We succeed as an inclusive and diverse team. Basing a hiring decision in whole or in part on an applicant’s disability may violate the law. An applicant with a disability should not be excluded from consideration based on assumptions or misperceptions. Talent Acquisition, Human Resources, Occupational Health and Safety, and the Legal Department should be consulted so they can work collaboratively with management and the applicant to determine whether the applicant’s disability restricts his ability to perform the essential functions of his job and, if so, whether reasonable accommodations exist that will permit him to perform those essential functions. The fact that a reasonable accommodation may be required should not affect our evaluation of his candidacy. If this candidate can perform all the essential functions of the position with reasonable accommodation, hiring him offers the benefits that a different perspective and experience will bring to the team.

Including diverse perspectives into our thinking leads to greater innovation, increased employee engagement and better solutions to take advantage of opportunities and overcome challenges.

Christopher M. Crane

Promoting a Respectful Workplace

How We Live Our Values

At Exelon, we thrive by treating each other with respect, fairness, and dignity.

Why It's Important

Our people have the right to come to work in an atmosphere that is free from harassment. A respectful workplace allows us to focus on what's important: collaborating with each other to provide reliable, clean, and affordable energy.

Whether we are at an Exelon facility, at an offsite company-sponsored function or representing the company in any way, harassment that impacts our workplace is unacceptable. Harassment violates the Code, our core values and often the law – and it won't be tolerated.

What's Expected

A respectful workplace requires that we:

- Deal with others in a considerate, courteous, and respectful manner

- Think about how our actions and comments might be received by others before we act or speak
- Not make – or tolerate – comments, insults, jokes, or slurs with sexual, racial, gender, or ethnic innuendo
- Do not engage in abusive conduct, including verbal abuse and physical conduct that another person would find threatening or humiliating
- Do not display or disseminate pictures, cartoons or posters that denigrate any protected personal characteristic
- Provide a work environment free of unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors and other unwelcome verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature
- Apologize if something we do or say causes offense
- Speak up to report harassment without fear of retaliation

For more information, see HR-AC-72, our Policy Against Discrimination, Harassment, and Retaliation, and HR-AC-73, our Policy Against Sexual Harassment.

The Right Decisions

Q After completing a large project, our team celebrated with a company-sponsored dinner at a local restaurant. After several drinks, one of my co-workers told several sexually suggestive jokes and made a similarly themed comment about one of our female co-workers who was present, but out of earshot. Several other employees looked uncomfortable, but no one said anything. Shortly afterward, I noticed one female co-worker leave the restaurant abruptly. What should I do?

A You should speak up. If you are comfortable doing so, tell your co-worker that the jokes and comments are unwelcome and inappropriate. Whether you address it directly or not, you must report the incident to your supervisor, HR and/or the Compliance and Ethics Office. Although the dinner was off company premises, it was a work-related event and Exelon's expectations regarding values and acceptable behavior apply. Fostering a culture of trust, collaboration and performance means that no employee should be made to feel uncomfortable, even in a more informal "social" setting.

Avoiding Conflicts of Interest

How We Live Our Values

We must make decisions and act in the best interests of Exelon, not allowing our personal interests to get in the way of what's right for our business, customers, or shareholders.

07 Our Company

Conflict of Interest Quick Test

If I take this course of action:

1. Will I feel obligated to someone else?
2. Am I acting inconsistently with Exelon's values?
3. Could my independent judgment be compromised?
4. Could it give the appearance of impropriety or divided loyalty?

If you answer "yes" to any of these questions, a real or perceived conflict of interest may exist. Immediately seek guidance from a manager or the Compliance and Ethics Office.

What's Expected

To avoid conflicts of interest you should:

- Refuse to participate in any activity, interest or association that could compromise your individual judgment and prevent you from acting in the best interests of the company
- Recognize that even the appearance of a conflict between personal interests and those of Exelon can undermine trust
- Avoid actions that may lead to the appearance of a conflict of interest
- Seek guidance from a manager or the Compliance and Ethics Office whenever there is a question concerning an actual or potential conflict of interest
- Promptly disclose all potential conflicts to the Compliance and Ethics Office
- Remove yourself from the decision making process in any situation that might present even the appearance of a conflict of interest

Why It's Important

With every business decision and choice that we make, we have an impact on the performance and reputation of Exelon. Our decisions must be based on the facts and our best judgment, while being mindful of our core values and what's best for the company.

Allowing personal interests, relationships, or activities outside of work to interfere with our jobs or our ability to make objective business decisions for the good of Exelon is a conflict of interest. Such conflicts must be avoided because they can harm our effectiveness as well as our reputation for integrity. Even the appearance of a conflict of interest can make others think we are acting improperly. Many conflicts of interest can be avoided or addressed if promptly disclosed and properly managed. This section provides guidance on some of the more common conflicts of interest, but it cannot cover every situation we may face.

Personal Relationships

Personal relationships with family members, close friends or romantic partners must not impact, or even appear to impact, our judgment and decision making for Exelon.

To avoid conflicts of interest, we must:

- Make decisions objectively, without favoritism and in the best interest of the company
- Promptly disclose to the Compliance and Ethics Office or Human Resources any personal relationships that create or appear to create a conflict of interest
- Not manage any business relationship where the business partner employs someone with whom we have a close personal or family relationship
- Recuse ourselves from employment decisions (including interviewing, hiring, promoting, or disciplining) that involve anyone with whom we have a close personal or family relationship
- Not supervise, directly or indirectly, anyone with whom we have a close personal relationship

Personal or Family Financial Interests

Considerations of personal finances (or those of family and friends) must not impair our ability to make objective decisions on behalf of and in the best interests of the company. This may include investment in, or ownership of, an Exelon competitor, supplier, contractor, or partner.

We must avoid conflicts of interest by:

- Ensuring that our own investments and business relationships do not conflict with our obligation to act in the best interests of Exelon
- Promptly disclosing to the Compliance and Ethics Office any investments or business or personal relationships that might create, or appear to create, a conflict of interest
- Not having a material financial interest in any organization that does business, seeks to do business, or competes with Exelon, without prior approval

What does "material financial interest" mean?

"Material financial interest" means having any financial involvement or ownership interest that might influence or reasonably be thought by others to influence an employee's judgment or action in the conduct of Exelon's business. You should consult the Compliance and Ethics Office for guidance regarding whether specific financial interests are material.

Gifts and Business Entertainment

To maintain integrity in our business relationships, you must not offer or accept gifts, entertainment or anything of value that are intended to influence a business decision or official action relating to Exelon or might be perceived that way by others.

The Right Decisions

Q I have been working with a certain vendor for years. I know the owners and most of their employees pretty well. I am often asked by others at Exelon for input on the vendor's performance, although I don't have direct involvement in payment issues or renewal decisions. During the holidays, they usually send me a gift basket of food that I set out for my team to share. This year, the vendor included a $50 gift card, sent to me personally, with a nice note. I am certain the gift card won't influence my treatment of the vendor and I don't want to insult them. Can I keep the gift card?

A No. A gift card for any amount is no different from cash and accepting it sends the wrong message, even if the sender is well-intentioned. All cash and cash equivalents received from third parties must be declined. You should return it with a polite note explaining that company policy prevents you from accepting.

Avoid conflicts of interest in business relationships by recognizing your obligation to:

- Not offer or accept any gift of more than modest value
- Not accept any monetary gifts, such as cash, gift cards or personal discounts
- Ensure that all business entertainment has a legitimate business purpose
- Decline unacceptable gifts or offers of entertainment and explain that company policy prohibits accepting them (see examples below)
- Decline offers of business entertainment from any third party where payment, contracting or other related decisions about the third party are pending (e.g. a pending RFP or a dispute over vendor compensation or performance)
- Obtain prior guidance from the Compliance and Ethics Office if there is any question whether it is appropriate to accept a particular gift or offer of business entertainment.
- Accurately account for any gifts or entertainment in expense records
- Ensure costs are allocated properly. If travel is necessary to attend a business entertainment event hosted by a third party, Exelon should pay those costs, including lodging. Conversely, if Exelon hosts the event, third-party attendees should pay their own travel and lodging costs
- Obtain guidance from the Compliance and Ethics Office and/or the relevant government and regulatory affairs team before offering or providing any gift, entertainment, or anything of value to any government official or employee of a state owned entity

Here are some examples of generally acceptable gifts and business entertainment, as well as some examples of gifts and entertainment that are generally unacceptable and must be declined or reviewed by management and the Compliance and Ethics Office to determine if the circumstances allow for acceptance:

Generally Acceptable

Entertainment

- Infrequent meals of reasonable value at business-appropriate locations
- Providing third parties with occasional meals, entertainment, refreshments or incidental hospitality

Gifts

- Mementos, advertising novelties and souvenirs, and promotional or logoed items of modest value
- Small personal gifts or expressions of gratitude, such as flowers

Educational and Training Programs

- Participation in routine training and professional development opportunities offered by vendors, such as seminars and panel presentations, that do not involve paid travel or lavish meals or entertainment

Generally Unacceptable

Entertainment

- Tickets to a playoff game, championship or other high profile sporting event (for example, the Super Bowl, the Stanley Cup Finals, the World Series, the World Cup, etc.)
- Any entertainment offered by a supplier during a pending RFP or any contract or commercial negotiations
- All-expenses-paid event sponsored by a supplier
- Lavish entertainment or meals at expensive restaurants
- Visiting an adult entertainment venue or other questionable locale
- Frequent meals and entertainment from a continuing business supplier

Gifts

- Paying business partners' travel or lodging to attend an Exelon-sponsored event
- Cash, gift certificates or cash equivalents
- Personal discounts or loans
- Lavish personal gifts, such as designer clothing, handbags or expensive jewelry

Outside Employment and Other Activities

Exelon encourages our people to lead full and productive lives outside of work. While at work, we must give our best effort every day, not allowing outside jobs or other activities to hinder our contributions to Exelon and our customers.

Outside activities – such as community work or serving on the board of a non-profit, or on an educational or residential board – are encouraged as long as they do not interfere with our ability to fulfill our Exelon responsibilities.

To avoid conflicts of interest we must:

- Disclose and obtain prior approval for all outside employment or consulting opportunities (even short-term or hourly consulting engagements)
- Ensure that outside activities do not interfere or create conflicts of interest with our Exelon job responsibilities or performance
- Obtain approval from a manager and the Office of Corporate Governance before serving on any board or advisory board of any for-profit organization
- Not conduct outside business, political campaigns or other similar activities while working on company time
- Not use Exelon resources to conduct activities unrelated to company business
- Not work for a competitor, supplier, or other entity likely to do business with the company

Corporate Opportunities

We must always put Exelon's interests ahead of our own. Any business opportunities we discover, through our work or the use of company property or information, belong to Exelon and must not be used for our personal benefit.

To avoid conflicts of interest we must:

- Bring any on-the-job discoveries or innovations related to Exelon's business to the company's attention
- Not take for ourselves opportunities discovered through the use of company property, company information or our position
- Not use proprietary information acquired on the job for personal gain or any other purpose not in furtherance of our job duties
- Not compete against Exelon or assist others in doing so

Creating, Maintaining and Disclosing Accurate Books and Records

How We Live Our Values

We must maintain complete and accurate records to make responsible business decisions and provide truthful and timely information to Exelon shareholders, investors, regulators, and other stakeholders.

Why It's Important

Business and financial records are essential to our business operations. Exelon relies on the integrity and accuracy of these records to make strategic decisions. Similarly, investors, government agencies, regulators and others rely on the integrity and accuracy of our records and disclosures for their own purposes.

Each of us is responsible for the accuracy of all the records we generate and data we input – from individual timecards to corporate balance sheets to equipment maintenance records. Accurate and transparent record keeping protects our reputation, promotes organizational efficiency and safety, and helps us meet our legal and regulatory obligations. It's also essential in helping our business better serve our customers.

What's Expected

Creating and maintaining accurate books and records and ensuring accurate disclosures requires that we:

- Follow generally accepted accounting principles and all procedures and guidelines in our internal control systems
- Not keep off-the-books accounts or false or incomplete records
- Not make an entry in any record that misrepresents, conceals, or disguises the true nature of any transaction, event, or condition
- Record all business transactions, events, and conditions accurately, completely, and in a timely fashion
- Ensure there is clear, complete, fair, and accurate reporting of financial and non financial information pertaining to business transactions
- Follow all delegation of authority and segregation of duties requirements established by the company involving the authorization, creation, approval, and reconciliation of transactions
- Provide receipts and back-up documentation when required
- Not mislead or misinform anyone about our business operations or finances
- Immediately report any requests to manipulate accounts, books and records or financial reports, and any suspected misconduct regarding accounting, internal controls or auditing matters to the Compliance and Ethics Office, Exelon Audit Services, or the Legal Department
- Report to Exelon Audit Services any accounting or internal control deficiencies that could adversely affect Exelon's ability to accurately record, process, or report financial or operations data

Managing Our Records Appropriately

How We Live Our Values

We must accurately manage our records to protect Exelon’s proprietary and confidential information and meet our legal and regulatory obligations.

Why It’s Important

Proper records management is essential to the vital flow of information within Exelon. It also reduces risks associated with outdated information and helps us meet our legal obligations and respond appropriately in legal and regulatory proceedings.

What’s Expected

Proper records management requires that we:

- Maintain, retain and dispose of business records in accordance with Exelon’s Records Management Policy
- Abide by all notices for the retention of documents issued by the Legal Department
- Contact the Compliance and Ethics Office or the Legal Department with any questions about what to retain or discard, or for help understanding or complying with any record hold or retention notice

For more information see LE-AC-4, our Corporate Policy on Records and Information Management, Retention and Disposition, and LE-AC-401, our Corporate Procedure on Records and Information Management, Retention and Disposition.

Company records can include:

- Communications in any form or media
- Policies and procedures
- Purchase orders and invoices
- Contracts
- Reports, memos, analyses, maps, schedules, tables, presentations, and financial models
- Personnel files
- Production reports

Company records come in all formats and media, including:

- Paper documents, including correspondence, engineering drawings, architectural plans, charts, records, sketches, and maps
- Photographs, prints, and electronic media files
- Electronic records, including databases, email, chat and text messages and other forms of electronic communication, and documents such as spreadsheets, presentation decks, and written materials
- Audio and video recordings, including voice mail
- Microfilm, microfiche, aperture cards, and other microform media

Note that whether something is a company record is determined by its content, not where and how it is stored.

Protecting Company Assets

How We Live Our Values

We must protect Exelon’s assets and use them responsibly so we can better serve our customers and thrive in a dynamic industry.

Why It’s Important

Exelon’s assets are essential to running our company efficiently, effectively, and profitably. They are the resources we use to drive progress. While our responsibilities will vary depending on the type of asset and our individual roles within Exelon, one thing remains the same – each of us is responsible for protecting company assets.

- Physical assets include anything tangible that we use to conduct our business, from computers to office supplies and furnishings, all the way to transmission lines, substations, and natural gas mains. The land, buildings, vehicles and inventory Exelon owns or has interests in are also physical assets.
- Information assets include any data relating to Exelon’s business, no matter how it is created, distributed, used, or stored. This includes computer software and data in our files and on our servers.
- Intangible assets include Exelon’s ideas, inventions, improvements, intellectual property, designs, copyrights, licenses, trademarks, patents, and trade secrets.
- Financial assets include money and anything that can be converted to money, such as stocks, bonds, loans, and deposits.

What’s Expected

To protect Exelon’s assets, we must:

- Use them prudently, carefully, and efficiently
- Take reasonable steps to protect company assets, ensuring they are not damaged, abused, destroyed, wasted, lost, or stolen
- Use company assets only for Exelon business purposes, regardless of condition or value
- Not sell, lend, borrow, give away or dispose of company assets without proper authorization
- Promptly report any abuse or misuse

Protecting Our Confidential Information

Business information is a critical Exelon asset. We must closely protect the company’s confidential information and intellectual property against unauthorized disclosure and misuse, which could limit our growth and threaten our ability to compete in the future.

Protecting Exelon’s confidential information requires that we:

- Do not post confidential information on any social media sites
- Do not work with or discuss confidential information in public areas, such as airplanes, elevators, and restaurants, where your conversations may be overheard or confidential information may be viewed by others
- Keep confidential information secure
- Share sensitive information only with authorized co-workers or business partners who have a legitimate need to know

- Take steps to prevent unauthorized individuals from acquiring confidential information
- Do not divulge confidential information to persons outside of the Exelon business, except where such disclosure is appropriately authorized, legally mandated or done in accordance with a confidentiality and non-disclosure agreement
- Continue to protect Exelon confidential information even if we leave the company
- Protect our customers’ and suppliers’ confidential information as we would protect Exelon’s confidential information, and consistent with any additional legal and contractual requirements.

For more information, see our Corporate Procedure LE-AC-301, Protecting Exelon Information and related procedures and policies.

The Right Decisions

Q A peer utility asked for copies of specific Management Model policies and procedures. Can I share them with another company?

A There is tension between the company's inclination to share best practices for the benefit of the industry – particularly through industry groups such as EEI, EPRI, or AGA – and our need to control Exelon's proprietary information. In most situations, the right balance is to not hand over our policies and procedures, but rather to provide the other company's personnel with a verbal overview. Contact your management team, the Legal Department or the functional area that has governance over specific documents with questions.

What are some examples of confidential information?

- Business plans, reports, and projections (including estimates or reports of production, reserves, and resources)
- Company policies and procedures that are not publicly disseminated
- Marketing and sales strategies
- Patents, trademarks, and other intellectual property
- Inventions, ideas, proprietary information, and trade secrets
- Estimates and non-public reports of resources, reserves, exploration results and productivity
- Applications, proposals, and contracts
- Unpublished financial information
- Confidential information belonging to other parties with which we do business, such as prices charged or proposed to Exelon for goods and/or services
- Technological developments and designs
- Computer software
- Customer or supplier lists
- Customer information

Using Information and Communications Systems Responsibly

Exelon's information and communications systems are critical to providing reliable, clean, and affordable energy. We all must be prudent and responsible in our use of these systems.

Our information and communications equipment and systems include mobile devices, computers, and networks. They are the property of Exelon, as are the contents of communications shared over these systems, such as email, voicemail, social media posts, instant messages, recordings, texts, and any other electronic messages.

Incidental personal use of these resources is permitted if it's reasonable and does not interfere with work responsibilities or expose Exelon to potential liability.

What is "acceptable use"?

Incidental, infrequent, and reasonable personal use of Exelon mobile devices, computers and related resources is acceptable. Limited personal use of the company's electronic information assets is permitted if it is not detrimental to the productivity of the employee or co-workers, does not cause liability or additional costs to the company, and is not otherwise prohibited by management.

Responsible use of Exelon's information and communications systems requires that we:

- Grant access only to authorized individuals
- Rigorously protect passwords and IDs
- Take precautions to ensure company systems and devices are not compromised by malicious electronic threats, such as viruses and phishing schemes
- Recognize that we have no reasonable expectation of privacy when using company-provided information technology and equipment
- Take the same care composing any electronic message that we would when writing a letter on company letterhead
- Not use Exelon information, communications systems, or equipment for illegal or unethical activities, such as viewing or sending content that is pornographic, obscene, sexually oriented, harassing, violent, discriminatory, likely to incite hatred or otherwise offensive

Substantive business messaging should be conducted on Exelon networks and communication platforms, not on personal accounts, absent special circumstances.

For more information, see our Corporate Procedure SY-AC-6, Acceptable Use Policy.

Avoiding Insider Trading

How We Live Our Values

Exelon supports fair and open markets for buying and selling securities. Insider trading is illegal and distorts financial markets.

Why It's Important

Insider trading is illegal and damages the trust we have with our investors, the government, and the marketplace.

Insider trading is committed when people who have material nonpublic information trade in shares or other securities of a company before the information becomes available to the public. Because of our roles at Exelon, many of us have that kind of "inside information" – information that is not known to the public that might be important to someone considering buying or selling shares in Exelon or any other company.

What's Expected

To avoid insider trading, we must:

- Not buy, sell, or trade the stock or other securities of Exelon or any other company while we have inside information

- Prevent inside information from being disclosed to people outside Exelon. This means:
 - Keep it secure – whether it's a physical lock on a file drawer or a password on a laptop or cell phone
 - Share it only with those within the company who have a legitimate business need to know
 - Don't share it with family or friends
 - Never discuss it in public or on social media
- Abstain from making buy or sell recommendations to anyone else while in possession of inside information
- Not engage in "short sales" or trading in market options such as puts or calls on Exelon securities
- Immediately report to the Compliance and Ethics Office or the Legal Department any inside information that has been mistakenly provided to unauthorized individuals

For more information, see our Corporate Procedure LE-AC-202, Insider Trading Compliance.

The Right Decisions

Q I was part of a team that recently completed a very significant transaction. As a result, I had access to communications that indicated company earnings would exceed expectations this quarter. I was planning to make some adjustments to my 401(k) account, including an increase in the percentage of company stock included in my contribution, before I saw the earnings communication. Can I still make that adjustment?

A No, not until the earnings results become public. Even when information does not actually influence you, trading after the receipt of insider information and prior to that information becoming public is prohibited by law. This might result in criminal charges and civil penalties against you.

Examples of inside information include:

- Unreleased company financial results and dividends
- Detailed business plans or marketing strategies
- Anticipated mergers, acquisitions, divestitures or joint ventures
- A significant change in corporate strategy
- Significant management changes
- Important developments in legal proceedings

08 Our Customers and Business Partners

Competing with Integrity

How We Live Our Values

At Exelon, we must conduct business honestly, fairly and lawfully. We must compete vigorously for business opportunities, distinguishing ourselves through integrity, superior performance and value.

Why It's Important

Healthy competition is good for our customers and the communities we serve. Our commitment to fair competition and responsible third-party sourcing policies and practices helps drive progress and value for our customers, communities and shareholders. We must avoid even the appearance of restraining trade or reducing competition.

It's therefore essential that we follow all applicable laws that govern the way companies compete, wherever we do business. These laws are complex and aggressively enforced; the consequences of violations can be serious for the individuals and companies involved. In our dealings with competitors, we must avoid even the appearance of restraining trade or reducing competition.

What's Expected

As regulated utilities, Exelon and its operating companies have few direct "competitors." However, Exelon and its affiliates participate in many competitive markets including but not limited to markets for labor, materials, and services. When participating in competitive markets, we must:

- Comply with antitrust laws and similar laws in any jurisdiction where we conduct business

- Ensure Exelon's business activities do not (and do not appear to) fix prices or costs between competitors, restrict output, divide markets or force a competitor out of business
- Protect from improper disclosure confidential information regarding pricing (past, present, or future), terms and conditions of business, contracts and bids, markets and territories, customers, costs, production and distribution
- Not enter into agreements that improperly restrain competition for labor
- Not disclose one bidder's confidential information to another bidder
- Remove ourselves from any conversation that could restrain trade or reduce competition, indicate our reason for doing so, and immediately report the matter to the Legal Department or the Compliance and Ethics Office
- Always remain aware of how conversations with peer utilities may be perceived, and avoid the appearance of misconduct

When dealing with customers, fair competition requires that we:

- Describe what we do and sell honestly and accurately
- Not make false claims or disparaging remarks about our competitors or their services
- Not interfere with a customer's existing business contracts to gain an unfair advantage

Promoting Fair Purchasing Practices

How We Live Our Values

We must select suppliers fairly and objectively to ensure the best value for Exelon while protecting our reputation and supporting the diverse communities we serve.

Why It's Important

Our suppliers often are an extension of Exelon. We count on them to help us deliver the best service for our customers. We work with a diverse group of suppliers who share our commitment to the highest standards in quality, price, service, reliability, availability, technical excellence, and delivery.

What's Expected

Those involved in purchasing and relationship management with suppliers have the responsibility to:

- Make procurement decisions with integrity, based on objective, fair and reasonable criteria

- Follow Exelon's third-party sourcing policies, procedures and processes and properly document and seek approval for any exceptions
- Ensure we have appropriate justification for any sole source procurement
- Avoid frequent or excessive business entertaining with any supplier
- Treat all suppliers professionally, ethically, and fairly – regardless of the value of the transaction or the length of the relationship
- Conduct Exelon business in good faith and resolve disputes with suppliers quickly and equitably
- Administer contracts to ensure Exelon receives the materials and/or services in full compliance with the contract terms

For more information, see Corporate Procedure SM-AC-POL1-001, Exelon Spending and Authorization to Contract with Suppliers Policy

Gathering Competitive Intelligence

As we evolve our business, we constantly monitor the competitive landscape and analyze industry trends. This allows us to anticipate and respond to customer demands for clean, affordable energy and the delivery of services. We gather competitive intelligence properly and legally, and do not solicit or accept other companies' trade secrets or other proprietary or confidential information.

Below is a list that includes some generally acceptable and generally unacceptable sources of competitive intelligence:

Generally Acceptable

- Public web sites and social media
- Newspapers and trade journals
- Public financial filings
- Publicly available industry analyst reports
- Marketing materials
- Third-party market research and analysis
- Governmental agency reports

Generally Unacceptable

- Emails intended for others
- Proposals
- Price sheets
- Process documents
- Business plans
- Found documents
- Non-public due diligence associated with M&A activity and other transactions
- Materials governed by a confidentiality agreement

If there is ever a doubt about how we are gathering competitive information, discuss it with your manager or contact the Legal Department for more guidance.

The Right Decisions

Q I work in project management. A supplier who is working on a current project asked me for some detailed information about a new project that just went out for bid. What should I do?

A While the supplier's intent may be innocent, informally providing any information about the new project might provide that firm with an advantage over other bidders. You should not provide any information about the new project, and should direct the supplier to the proper channel for obtaining information (in this case, the formal Request for Proposal information sharing protocols) and advise that they follow the process. Additionally, you should notify your manager, Compliance and Ethics, or the Legal Department that you received this request from the supplier.

Ensuring Appropriate Affiliate Interactions

How We Live Our Values

Federal and local laws and regulations require separation between utility transmission operations and affiliates that are not utilities.

Why It's Important

Regulatory authorities governing the energy industry established affiliate rules to safeguard the fair treatment of all utility rate payers. These rules guard against a number of unfair activities, such as inappropriately sharing information or allocating costs incurred by affiliates to a utility.

Where applicable, we must comply with all affiliate regulations, including:

- FERC Standards of Conduct
- Pennsylvania Code of Conduct
- Illinois Affiliate Non-Discrimination Rules
- New Jersey Affiliate Standards Rules
- Maryland Electric and Gas Companies – Affiliate Regulations
- Delaware Code of Conduct Governing Regulated Utility Activities and Competitive Activities
- District of Columbia Affiliate Code of Conduct

What's Expected

Appropriate affiliate interactions require that we must:

- Conduct utility transmission operations independently from any affiliates that are not utilities
- Not give non-public information about a utility's market or its transmission and distribution systems to any third parties on a preferential basis
- Properly charge or allocate costs between the regulated and other business functions of utilities and between utilities and their non-utility affiliates, as well as verifying that costs have been correctly allocated
- Not give preferential treatment regarding utility customer leads or transmission and distribution systems to any seller of electric energy, natural gas or energy services, whether an affiliate or competitor
- Not provide utility customer information to affiliates, unless we have the proper consent of the customer

Trading Energy Responsibly

How We Live Our Values

We conduct and report on our electric power and gas procurement activities in a transparent and ethical manner, complying fully with all applicable laws and regulations.

Why It's Important

The buying and selling of wholesale energy are governed by Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) rules and orders, while state laws, regulations and utility commission orders govern the provision of retail electric and gas service to customers. Ensuring the integrity of our energy procurement activities protects the company from violating these rules, helps to ensure such activities are conducted fairly by all participants in the marketplace and protects the company against cost disallowances.

What's Expected

Responsible energy procurement practices require that we must:

- Satisfy statutory and regulatory obligations to provide standard offer service (SOS), to function as the electric or gas service provider of last resort (POLR) or gas supplier of last resort (SOLR), to meet the needs of our customers

- Optimize energy procurements not utilized to meet POLR or SOLR responsibilities to benefit customers and shareholders, where applicable
- Responsibly execute regulatorily-approved energy commodity supply programs for the benefit of customers and shareholders
- Follow statutory, FERC and state utility commission-sanctioned frameworks, and structures that direct utilities on how to procure energy for retail end use customers
- Pursue transparent and reliable electric power supply and gas supply in full compliance with applicable statutory and regulatory mandates
- Prepare and maintain accurate documentation of all energy procurement transactions consistent with applicable laws and regulations

Protecting Personal Information

How We Live Our Values

We must value and preserve the trust that fellow employees, job applicants, customers, business partners and others place in us by safeguarding their personal information consistent with regulatory requirements.

What is considered personal information?

Personal information (sometimes known as personally identifiable information or PII) is information that can be used on its own or with other information to identify, contact or locate a single person, or to identify an individual in context. It can include names, Social Security numbers, financial account numbers, credit card numbers with security codes, medical records and other types of information that require protection due to regulations.

Why It's Important

To run our business effectively and comply with legal obligations, we gather, store, use and, when appropriate, share personal information, but we must always do so in a secure, confidential manner.

What's Expected

Protecting personal information requires that we must:

- Collect, use, and process personal information for legitimate business purposes only
- Restrict access to those who have both appropriate authorization and a clear business need to know
- Not share personal information with anyone (inside or outside the company) who does not have a clear business need for it
- Follow the company's information protection policies and procedures when handling personal information

For more information, see Corporate Procedure LE-AC-31, our Corporate Integrated Privacy Program.

Delivering on Quality, Reliability and Customer Service

How We Live Our Values

We satisfy our customers by providing reliable, clean, affordable energy and related products and services.

Why It's Important

Our customers are the heart of our business. Without them, we wouldn't exist. We must always treat them with courtesy and respect. We want them to value Exelon, and we will earn their loyalty if we understand – and even anticipate – their needs. By collaborating with each other to satisfy our customers' fundamental needs for high quality, reliable service with integrity, we will continue to earn their business.

What's Expected

To meet or exceed our customers' expectations, we must:

- Listen carefully and quickly respond to customer inquiries and requests
- Act professionally, respectfully and with empathy
- Work safely, responsibly, and courteously when on the property of a customer or other third party
- Treat customers fairly and consistently
- Use fair and honest practices in advertising, marketing, sales, and customer service interactions
- Not bypass quality controls or take shortcuts that compromise the quality or safety of our services

Government Relations

How We Live Our Values

We must interact with governments at all levels ethically and in full compliance with the law.

Why It's Important

Much of our business is regulated by federal, local, and state governments. Government entities also are important customers. How we interact with government officials is regulated by law and has a significant impact on our credibility, reputation, and success.

What's Expected

Those who interact with government agencies and officials, whether as regulators, customers or otherwise, have the responsibility to:

- Comply with all applicable laws, regulations, and company policies governing interactions with public officials. This includes but is not limited to laws and policies relating to lobbying, campaign contributions, gifts and entertainment, ex parte communications, bribery, and interactions with public officials

- Promptly report to your Government and External Affairs team or Compliance and Ethics any request, recommendation, or referral from a public official for anything of value, including but not limited to personnel actions, vendor contracts, directed charitable contributions.

For more details, employees should visit the Interacting With Public Officials SharePoint site, and third parties should visit this overview page on the Exelon web site.

- Ensure compliance with all applicable laws and regulations when a government entity is a customer, including government procurement and contracting regulations
- Provide timely, responsive, and accurate information in connection with any regulatory reporting requirements, information requests, or proceedings
- Cooperate fully and honestly with any government or law enforcement inquiry or investigation

Fighting Bribery and Corruption

How We Live Our Values

Our relationships with our customers, business partners, and government officials depend on trust, transparency, and accountability. We can only succeed by acting with integrity and providing superior value. We must not request, offer, or accept any form of payment or incentive intended to improperly influence a decision.

Why It's Important

Bribes and kickbacks of any kind are illegal, unethical, and violate our core values and the Code. Employees must abide by all applicable anti-corruption laws, including laws prohibiting offering and receiving bribes, kickbacks, and similar payments. These include laws from all jurisdictions in which the company operates, among them the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act and other federal, state, and foreign anti-corruption laws.

Exelon prohibits any employee, officer, director or third-party agent from providing, authorizing, offering, or promising to provide anything of value, directly or indirectly with the intent to improperly obtain a commercial advantage with respect to any third party.

anything of value to any government official or employee of a state-owned entity

- Keep accurate and complete records so all payments are properly documented
- Ensure company funds are not used for unlawful purposes
- Conduct appropriate due diligence of potential lobbyists, agents, political consultants, and other business partners
- Do not use or allow a third party to make payments or offers that could be improper

For more information, see LE-AC-60, our Anti-Bribery and Anti-Corruption Corporate Policy, and LE-AC-POL8-003, our Policy on Vendors and Suppliers Affiliated With or Referred, Recommended or Requested by Public Officials.

The FCPA:

- Makes it a crime to promise or offer money or anything of value to a foreign government official to improperly influence an official decision for the purpose of obtaining or retaining business
- Requires that publicly held companies, like Exelon, have accounting controls to assure that all transactions are recorded fairly and accurately in our books and records

What's Expected

- Obtain guidance from the Compliance and Ethics Office and/or the relevant government and regulatory affairs team before offering or providing any gift, favor, or entertainment, or

Bribery and kickbacks can occur in the context of both government action and commercial relationships.

Government bribery

Can occur when an employee, officer, director, or someone acting on behalf of the company provides, authorizes, offers, or promises to provide something of value, directly or indirectly, to any government official, with the intent to improperly influence or reward any official action. Giving or promising cash, jobs, vendor contracts, or directed charitable contributions to a public official, or to persons designated by the public official, for the purpose of improperly influencing or rewarding official action could constitute bribery of a public official.

Commercial bribery

Occurs in the context of business transactions. It can occur when a company employee, officer, or director solicits or accepts something of value from a third party (for example, a kickback for steering a contract to a vendor) in exchange for, or to influence, actions on behalf of Exelon. It also can occur when an Exelon employee, director, or third party intermediary provides, authorizes, offers, or promises to provide something of value to a third party with the intent to obtain an improper commercial advantage.

Bribes and kickbacks

Bribes and kickbacks of any kind are unethical, illegal and violate our core values and the Code.

Protecting the Environment

How We Live Our Values

At Exelon, our commitment to the environment is integral to meeting our customers' expectations and reducing our impact on future generations.

09 Our Communities

Our commitment to environmental stewardship stretches across the entire energy value chain. We proactively manage our environmental footprint, not only because we care about protecting the environment, but also to improve operational efficiency, maintain our license to operate and enhance our competitive position. As a result, we are able to better serve our customers, create value for our shareholders and employees, and enhance communities.

Christopher M. Crane

Why It's Important

Since its formation, Exelon has focused on the business value of reducing our impact on the environment and better meeting the needs of our customers, our employees, and the communities we serve. In all that we do, we seek to exceed the standards of our industry – as well as the standards we set for ourselves. We believe it's our responsibility to lead the industry in shaping public policy on strategic environmental issues.

Our values include the following environmental commitments:

- We will actively pursue excellence by reaching beyond compliance to reduce our impact on the environment, address climate change, improve energy and resource efficiency, and provide our customers with clean, safe, and affordable energy

- We will innovate to better serve our customers through smart meters, energy efficiency programs for homes and businesses, transportation electrification options, and other methods of enabling and delivering clean energy
- We will act with integrity and be accountable to our communities and the environment

We must ensure that our actions are consistent with environmental stewardship, and demonstrate environmental leadership through full legal compliance, pollution prevention and continuous improvement.

What's Expected

We must:

- Meet or exceed all applicable environmental laws, regulations, and voluntary commitments
- Use natural resources efficiently to reduce environmental impacts and operating costs
- Partner with the communities where we operate to enhance the environment, combat climate change, and build resilience for the future

- Report any spills, releases or other environmental hazards or accidents to our supervisors immediately
- Not provide false information on any environmental monitoring or sampling report to government officials or the company

Contributing to Our Communities

How We Live Our Values

The energy we deliver to our customers is important, but so too is the human energy Exelon’s people bring to the communities where we operate.

Why It’s Important

Exelon has a strong tradition of community involvement. Through various Exelon programs, our employees are strong ambassadors for corporate giving and community service to improve the quality of life in our communities.

Our vision includes the following goals:

- Advance our strong tradition of community service by improving the quality of life of the people in the communities we serve and where we work
- Strengthen and enrich our communities through corporate giving in four areas – education, environment, neighborhood and workforce development, and arts and culture – and encourage our people to support the organizations that they value

We encourage employees to:

- Participate in Exelon’s matching funds program for donations to charitable or civic organizations that enrich our communities
- Give time generously to our communities, so long as those activities don’t interfere with our job performance

Employees must avoid inappropriately pressuring other employees or suppliers to contribute to charitable or civic organizations or causes.

Participating in Political Activities

How We Live Our Values

At Exelon, we are committed to engage constructively with governments where we operate. Likewise, we encourage employees to participate in the political process.

Why It's Important

Exelon believes that an active, inclusive, and fair political process promotes open government, sound policy decisions, and safe, healthy, and productive communities. We recognize that public policy decisions can greatly impact our customers, our business, and our industry, now and in the future.

As individuals, we all have a right to participate in civic activities and the political process. However, we always need to make it clear that our views and actions are our own – not those of Exelon.

What's Expected

Responsible company participation in political activities requires that we:

- Follow established procedures for making corporate contributions and conducting activities to support state or local candidates – see LE-AC-23, Corporate Political Contributions Guidelines
- Not coerce or pressure others to make contributions to any political candidate, party, advocacy group, political action committee, or political entity, or to support or oppose any political candidate or election. Exelon leaders may not solicit employees for political contributions other than (i) voluntary contributions to Exelon-affiliated political action committees; (ii) voluntary participation in events sponsored by the company or its affiliated political action committees, or (iii) participation by corporate officers pursuant to a corporate voluntary contributions program

- Obtain prior guidance from the Compliance and Ethics Office and/or the relevant government and regulatory affairs team before offering or providing any gift, entertainment or anything of value to any government official or employee of a state-owned entity.

When participating in political activities as individuals, we must:

- Make personal political contributions with the understanding that we will not be reimbursed by the company
- Understand that only where state law permits, minimal use of company resources – such as phones, computers, email, fax machines or office supplies – is allowed for personal political purposes (consult the Legal Department for additional guidance on this issue)
- Not require other employees, including administrative or other support staff, to perform tasks in support of our personal political activities
- Make it clear that our personal political views and actions are our own, and not those of the company

Lobbying

Exelon, like many other companies, advocates for legislation we believe will enhance value for our customers, communities, employees, and shareholders. Those of us who have contact with legislators, regulators, executive branch officials or their staffs may be involved in lobbying and must take care to comply with the laws applicable to these activities.

Only Exelon employees who have been approved to lobby, and contract lobbyists retained and overseen pursuant to the company's Due Diligence and Monitoring Procedure for Third Parties Engaged in Political Consulting and Lobbying Activities, LE-AC-PCD8-001, may engage in lobbying activities.

Communicating Publicly About Exelon

How We Live Our Values

At Exelon, we must speak with one voice when communicating publicly to all audiences, including customers, investors, financial analysts, and the media.

Why It's Important

Our customers, consumers, investors, industry analysts, journalists, public interest groups and others deserve accurate, clear, complete, and consistent communications from Exelon. Because these interactions require careful consideration and an expert understanding of legal, regulatory, financial and media issues, only designated Exelon spokespersons are authorized speak on the company's behalf.

What's Expected

If you receive an inquiry from outside the company and are not authorized to respond on behalf of the company, you should:

- Refer all media-related inquiries to Exelon Corporate Communications
- Refer all investor-related inquiries to the Investor Relations Department

Engaging in Social Media Responsibly

Social media – networking sites, video/photo sharing, blogs, forums and others – are powerful forms of communication that are widely used by consumers, investors and other audiences to share opinions and seek information. Social media can be a great vehicle for communicating our passion and knowledge to our customers and the outside world.

If we choose to use social media, we must keep in mind that what we say or share can affect:

- Our colleagues in the workplace
- Exelon's reputation with the customers and communities we serve
- Exelon's ability to compete in the marketplace
- Exelon's compliance with laws and regulations

Responsible use of social media includes:

- Adhering to Exelon's values in all authorized business communications
- Not creating the impression that our personal opinions are those of Exelon
- Not identifying ourselves as an Exelon representative without authorization
- Ensuring that time and effort spent on social media does not interfere with our job responsibilities
- Not disclosing proprietary company information
- Not divulging the personal information of others, especially personal data obtained as part of your job duties or our company relationships

For more information see CP-AC-72, Corporate Guidelines - Social Media.

©Exelon Corporation. 2022. All rights reserved.

At Exelon, our values demand a commitment to ethical behavior that goes beyond the letter of the law, and includes respecting our diverse and inclusive stakeholders, promoting a culture of safety, respecting the environment, and avoiding any business activity that could tarnish the company's reputation. Living this commitment, living our values, is how we will achieve our vision.
